OUTRAGES IN OKLAHOMA

KU KLUX KLAN KRITICISED.

OKLAHOMA CITY, October 118 The final struggle between the legislative and executive forces of the State began with a meeting of the legislature in extraordinary session which is expected to result in the impeachment of Governor. Walton. In a message read at the opening of the Assembly the Governor alleged that the supergovernment of the Ku Klux Klan was underniging the very foundations of the State" and the present conflict was between the "visible and invisible. governments." The governor charged the Klan with the responsibility for innumerable outrages and produced transcripts of evidence before tribunals which he asked the legislature to investigate.

How the English Channel was Formed.

The Geological Association has just given a week's study of the Boulonnais. The marked feature of the area visited is that it is a bit of Kent across the Channel. As a member of the party pointed out, in the distant past Kent was joined to the mainland, and the South Downs extended across what is now the English Channel into the Boulonnais, with a river intersecting them. This river, in the course of time, caused such erosion of the chalk that the sea was let through, and the English Channel thus formed. But beneath the sea the same chalk Downs still run, and it will be through these-if the scheme is ever brought to fruition -the Channel Tunnel will be cut.

ROWING IN HONGKONG.

INTERESTING REVIEW.

the present activities in the V.R.C. and The Royal Hongkong Yacht Club on the occasion of training for the Interport Events at Shanghai, 3rd, and 4th November. Great improvements however, in the general interest in rowing are yet to take place to make Hongkong the ideal centre for this healthy sport in the Far East; this our Crown Colony can rightly claim in view of its ideal and beautiful harbour, which should tempt all healthy youths to take this easy chance of spending their spare time on the water by taking up this fine recreation.

GOOD MATERIAL.

Our two local rowing clubs are in possession of exceptionally good rowing materials, and it is unfortunate that the great number of boats, which have been obtained by these clubs at very considerable expense indeed, are not fully taken advantage of. Furthermore, both clubs are in possession of several old and skilled oarsmen who will he only too pleased to take beginners in hand and give them the necessary coaching. In this respect it is indeed very pleasant to watch the training of our Interport Crews. We see some of the colony's old parsmen daily spending their time in the ungrateful work of making our crews as perfect as possible and it to make especially on taking into consideration that several of the oarsmen are practically beginners. It is positively certain that when the final touch has been put to these crews before their departure Shanghai on the inst. they will be a very strong combination and no-doubt

Although there have been lately a few attacks of Flu, colds &c., amongst the members of the Interport Crews, they are, generally speaking, in good condition and with yet another three weeks to go, they should be in the very best form at the time of the Regatta. ### GRANTING A REPRIEVE. THE HOME SECRETARY'S

POWERS.

The reprieve of Alexander Campbell. Mason, who was sentenced to death for the murder of the Brixton taxi driver, reintroduces the public to that interesting prerogative possessed by a single State official, whereby, at his behest, the whole complex machinery of the law may be set aside and a criticent is believed to be dallying decision overruling those of the Courts undertaken. It is a kind of is coedited with the intention of safety-valve this in the British making a most startling announcelegal system, introduced to make | ment towards the end of the present sure that the last dread penalty of month. We desire to warn Miniedeath shall not be enacted where ters that duties on premier foodthere exists any doubt or stuffs will instantly wreck the Govspecial consideration, humane erament or the political party which or legal. In the English legal, makes so preposterous an attempt." system, more than in the Scottish, there is the right of a prisoner, convined by judge and jury trial, to appeal; but even if that go against the prisoner there is preference proposals which, on the the last resort of the direct appeal to the Home Secretary. And in cessions to the Dominions that may Mason's case this final appeal triumphed! It is customary for the Home Crown, whose judicial experience and judgment is utilised to guide the official mind. In the case of Mason, the Crowa's legal advisers, together with Sir Archibald Bedkin and Sir Richard Muir, both of whom were concerned in the prosecution of Mason, were summoned to assist the Home Secretary.

Sir Archibald Bodkia was known counsel. In the Starchfield murder case, where the father was charged with killing in a railway train his nwn little fair-haired boy, a street newsvender, Sir Archibald performed an act almost unknown in big murder trials. After having led his own evidence against Starchfield, Sir Archibald turned to the Judge and asked that tle case he stop ed. He declared there were discrepancies in the testimony of his witnesses as to the ctothes worn by Starchfield when the gamekeeper had acted too he was supposed to kill his son: and he would not go to the jury on such discrepancies. In this the Judge concurred, and Starchfield walked out of the dock. And in the Mison case, 'Sir Archibald's humane consideration exerted itself on behalf of the Scottish prisoner-the man who said he was innocent and would die as a Scotsman. Sir Richard Mujr, who opposed Muson at the trial, it is to be remembered, is a Greenock man, a fellow-Scot. H: it was who convicted Crippea. But Sir Richard also is a very humane counsel. Harking back to another great appeal case, that of Oscar Slater. of 14 years ago, here the Scottish Secretary (who fulfils the same function in the case of crimes committed in Scotlan I, as the Home Secretary does for England) called in Lord Haldane, the famous Scottish legal luminary, to | and a request for reprieve is asked ndvise him; and although every- | for one, the Secretary of State selthing is a secret that passed domintervenes. The Daily Telegraph says that the effect of the Government's proposals is that, without interfering with the free entry of essential foods and thus raising highly debatable issues, they enable us to do someas a most humane prosecuting thing to assist the development and settlement of the Empire.

> reprieve occurred in the West of Scotla: d just fifty years ago. Two Port-Glasgow poachers, of whom Mullias was one, had been condemned to death for the shooting of a gamekeeper who had come upon them while they were out on poaching beat. It had been silver (per oz.) suggested in the evidence that aggressively and induced the peachers to shoot. A vigorous attempt was made all over the West of Scotland to save them from the Bir Silver in Hongkong ... gallows. However, despite a wide- Chinese Copper Cash ... ly-signed petition, the Scottish Secretary declined to respond, and the two poschers were executed in Dake Street Prison, Glasgow.

That agitation in favour of Multips and his associate recalled, in the fervour of the movement, the hug-and-cry some months ago to save Mrs. Thompson from the gallows. Here also, there being two persons concerned, the State Secretary could not very well allow one off without making matters a great deal worse; while both obviously could not get off for a murder so coldly prepared and executed.

THE WHITEINCH CASE.

Where there are two persons, stronger than against Oscar in evidence emerging to warrant Slater. That shows how great such a recommendation, the Harkness a plea for mercy-which the Secretary of Scotland accepted very humane act. But they forgot After his condemnation and that Harkness could not, as a man going beyond the evidence. Perhaps the one case in Scotland for the past generation where not a word of regret or a solitary cry for reprieve was uttered concerned the death of Fraser and Rollins, the two Queen's Park murderers. The public mind never veered in its detestation of the pair of sulking ruffians; and not a drop of ink was spilled in writing to the Scottish Secretary over their fate. And they knew it well, the pair themselves! When the jury retired for consideration of their verdict, and the prisoners were momentarily taken downtairs to the cells, big Fraser, the Australian, remarked quite unaffectedly, "I am afraid there's only one way out of this, and that's at the end of the rope"!
